Oral History Interviews allows you to capture and preserve the memories, history, traditions and importantly the stories of survival and success, along with lessons learned. It is said that the loss of a single firefighter is like losing an entire library of knowledge. The history of your organization is embedded in the memories and stories of those who came before you.

This panel discussion will cover lessons learned and insights for conducting, recording and preserving your video interviews.

Join this panel discussion on how to conduct Oral History Interviews with:

NFHC President Rodney Slaughter
